Mental Health & Suicide: Helping Students Return To Campus After Hospitalization

Tuesday, April 17 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Colleges and universities must often work with students who are hospitalized due to psychiatric issues, first pre-hospitalization, and later as they prepare to return to campus. Students may agree to a voluntary hospitalization following a private or a public and disruptive suicide attempt. An involuntary commitment may result from a suicide attempt, for doing or attempting harm to others, or due to an inability to care for themselves. Regardless of whether a hospitalization is voluntary or involuntary, this process of returning to campus afterward is often fraught with challenges related to ensuring fairness, equity, and compliance with federal standards while also ensuring the safety of the individual and the campus community. Here, we'll cover some common missteps that institutions tend to make when dealing with students who are suicidal or experiencing some psychological crisis and are returning to campus after hospitalization, as well as some best practices for helping students to return to campus following a hospitalization.

Objectives:

- Discuss the role of conduct and the BIT creating recommendations and sanctions
- Discuss the dangers of treating students who have been hospitalized as different than the general student population
- Discuss the importance of involving parents, guardians or emergency contacts as part of the process
- Letting FERPA, HIPAA or state confidentially laws hinder communication in the process
- Learn how to empower and support faculty as part of the process
- Avoiding a Us vs. Them approach
- Discuss using Case Management to aid the process
- Learn how to assist and support students through medical withdrawal options to ensure that they are in the best footing should they choose to return to campus
- Create clear policies that demonstrate care for students
